

YOUR PERSONALISED PERIMENOPAUSE INSIGHT REPORT

Understanding what is happening to your body & why a different approach matters

By Srividya Gowri,
Founder, The 8th Element

What Your Assessment Suggests

Your answers suggest that your body may be responding to hormonal, metabolic, sleep, stress, and lifestyle changes.

This does not mean your body is failing you. It means your body may need a more personalized strategy for this stage.

The next step is understanding your symptoms clearly, then choosing the support that fits your body and life.

What Your Body May Need Now

In perimenopause and menopause, many women need less restriction and more stability.

A strong plan usually supports nutrition, strength, sleep, stress, blood sugar, and consistency together.

Balanced meals with enough protein & fibre

Strength-focused movement

Better sleep &
recovery support

Stress regulation and realistic routines

Hi, I'm Srividya (Menopause Coach)

I'm a Menopause Nutrition & Lifestyle Coach, and I'm passionate about helping women navigate perimenopause and menopause with confidence.

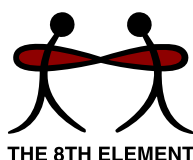

Through evidence-based nutrition, strength training and sustainable lifestyle habits, I help women feel healthier, stronger and more confident through every stage of menopause - without restrictive diets or quick fixes.

I created this guide because so many women tell me they feel frustrated, confused and often blame themselves for the changes they're experiencing. The truth is, you're not failing. Your body is changing, and with the right knowledge and support, you can work with your body instead of against it.

My hope is that by the end of this guide, you'll understand why menopause weight gain happens, feel reassured that you're not alone, and walk away with practical first steps you can start today.

Remember:

You don't need to do everything at once.
Small, consistent changes can lead to lasting results

THE 8TH ELEMENT

Does any of this sound familiar?

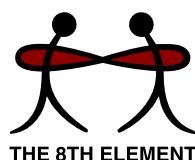

Have you found yourself looking in the mirror and wondering...

If this sounds familiar, I want you to know something. You are not failing. You are not lazy. And you certainly haven't lost your willpower. Your body is going through one of the biggest hormonal transitions of your life – and menopause changes the way it responds to food, movement, sleep, stress and recovery.

The Good News:

Once you understand what's changing, you can stop fighting your body and start working with it.

The biggest myth about MENOPAUSE WEIGHT GAIN

For years we've been told:

EAT LESS. EXERCISE MORE.

If only it were that simple. Many women try exactly that. They skip meals, walk for hours, cut out their favourite foods — yet the scales don't move. Or worse, the weight keeps creeping up, especially around the tummy.

The truth is, menopause changes your body. What worked in your 20s and 30s may no longer be the best approach. That doesn't mean weight loss is impossible — it simply means your body needs something different.

Remember This

Understanding why your body is responding differently is the first step towards lasting change.

WHAT'S REALLY HAPPENING?

Your HORMONES are changing

During menopause, levels of oestrogen naturally decline. One of the effects of this change is that many women begin storing more fat around the abdomen. You may notice:

- ✓ Clothes Fitting Differently
- ✓ A Thicker Waistline
- ✓ Weight Around Your Middle That Wasn't There Before

This isn't because you've suddenly become lazy. It's one of the many normal changes that can happen during menopause. Instead of trying to exercise more and eat less, start focusing on habits that support your changing body.

TRY THIS TODAY

Small changes done consistently will always beat extreme diets.

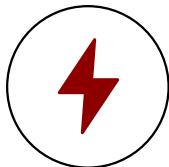

Your MUSCLES need more attention

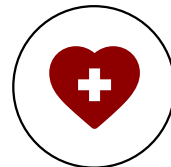

From our 30's onwards we naturally begin to lose muscle, and during menopause this can happen more quickly. Less muscle means your body burns less energy at rest - so everyday tasks feel harder, you feel weaker, and your metabolism feels slower.

Strength
Stay capable

Energy
Feel alive

Health
Age well

TRY THIS TODAY

Add strength training two or three times a week. You don't need heavy weights - building strength is about staying healthy, independent and active for years to come.

Your body needs MORE PROTEIN - NOT LESS FOOD

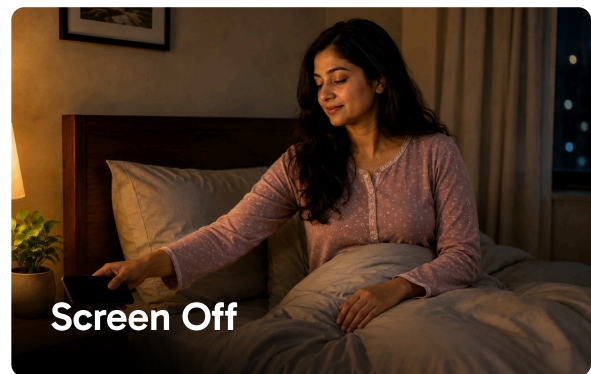

Many women focus on eating less. Instead, start by looking at what's on your plate. Protein helps maintain muscle, keeps you fuller for longer, supports recovery and supports healthy ageing.

At your next meal, ask yourself – “Where's my protein?”

- | | |
|-----------------|----------------------|
| ✓ Dal & Lentils | ✓ Eggs |
| ✓ Paneer | ✓ Curd/Greek Yoghurt |
| ✓ Fish | ✓ Chicken |
| ✓ Tofu & Soy | ✓ Beans |

POOR SLEEP changes more than you think

Many women struggle with sleep during menopause. Broken sleep doesn't just leave you tired - it also makes it harder to manage cravings, stay active, make healthy food choices, and recover from exercise. If you've been wondering why everything feels harder lately, you're not imagining it.

Choose one small evening habit this week. Switch off screens 30 minutes before bed:

- Read a book
- Stretch gently
- Practise slow breathing

STRESS is affecting more than your mood

Many women in midlife are juggling everything - work, family, teenage children, ageing parents, a busy household. Somewhere along the way, their own health slips to the bottom of the list. When life feels overwhelming, healthy habits are often the first thing to disappear.

That doesn't mean you've failed. It means you're human.

TRY THIS TODAY

Instead of trying to change everything, choose ONE healthy habit to focus on this week. Consistency beats perfection.

YEARS OF DIETING haven't helped

Think about how many diets you've tried. Lose weight. Put it back on. Start again on Monday. Sound familiar? You're not alone.

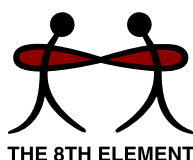

Your body doesn't need another quick fix. It needs an approach you can enjoy and maintain for years.

Stop asking:

"What's the quickest way to lose weight?"

Start asking:

"What's one healthy habit I could still be doing this time next year?"

Your body needs a NEW STRATEGY

Your body today isn't the same as it was twenty years ago and that's completely normal. Many women become frustrated because they're trying to use yesterday's strategy for today's body. The good news? You don't need to work harder. You simply need a plan that's right for this stage of life.

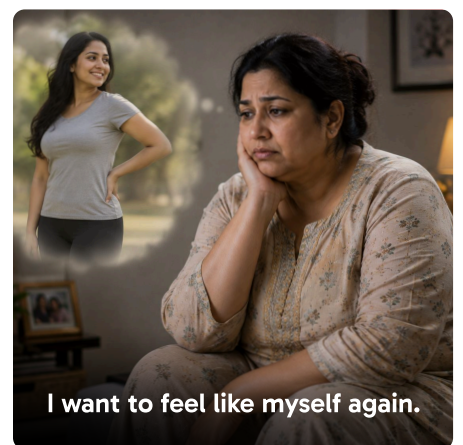

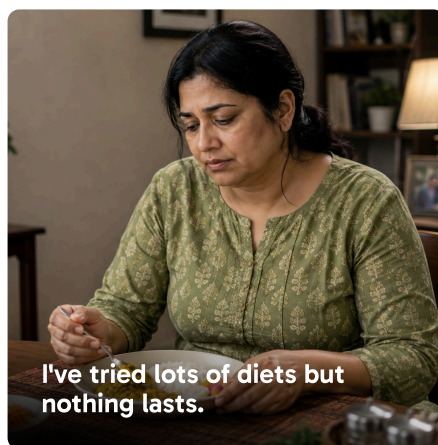

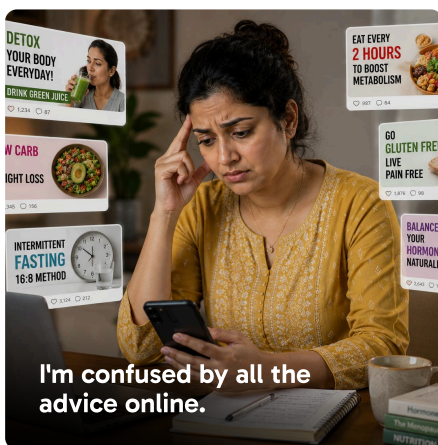

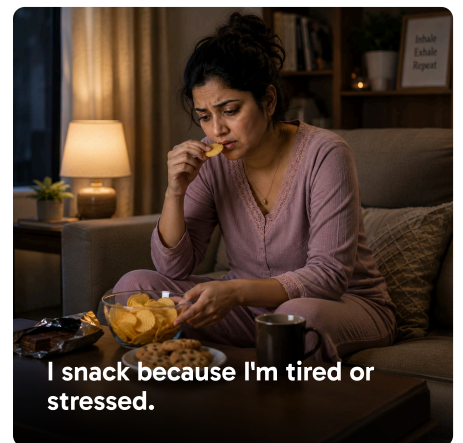

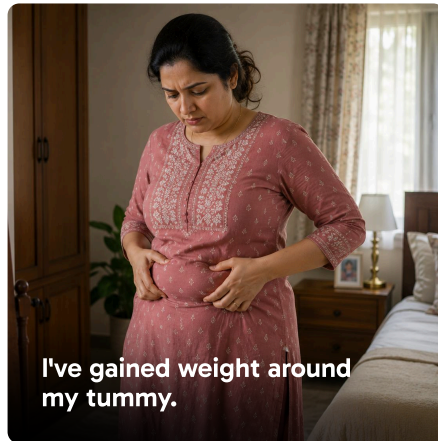

TRY THIS TODAY

Give your body what it needs now - not what it needed two decades ago.

Which of these sounds like you?

Notice which of these statements feel familiar.

What happens when you STOP FIGHTING YOUR BODY

Sharmila, 47

When Sharmila first started, the goal was not just weight loss—it was about creating a healthier, more sustainable relationship with her body and learning how to navigate the changes of midlife. Over 8 months, she lost over 10 kg sustainably, reached a weight she hadn't seen in four years, and learned to navigate menopause-related changes and stubborn weight gain without extreme dieting. But perhaps the biggest transformation was her mindset: learning to be less critical of herself, manage stressful periods without giving up on her progress, and build habits she could return to even when life got busy. Today, she has greater confidence, clarity and trust in her ability to take care of her health for the long term.

Aritu Sachdeva, 47

During her perimenopause journey, Aritu learned that sustainable change was about more than simply losing weight. Over 8 months, she lost 10+ kg and reached a weight she hadn't seen in four years. Along the way, she learned to navigate the challenges of perimenopause, manage stressful periods without abandoning her progress, and build sustainable habits with a healthier, more compassionate mindset.

Kriti, 45

Navigating perimenopause alongside significant health challenges, Kriti began her journey feeling exhausted, overwhelmed and disconnected from herself. Over six months, she lost weight and more than 60 cm in measurements, but the transformation went far beyond her body. She overcame an all-or-nothing mindset, learned to make small, sustainable changes, and began to feel lighter—not just physically, but mentally too. In her own words: "I feel happy from within looking at myself now."

What happens when you STOP FIGHTING YOUR BODY

Sangeetha Arjun, 40

When I started this journey, I honestly didn't know what to expect. I wasn't sure if it would be sustainable or if I would really be able to lose the weight I had put on after pregnancy and never lost for over 12 years — even though I was staying active.

What made this experience so different was Srividya's balanced and realistic approach. It never felt extreme or restrictive, just practical habits that could actually fit into everyday life.

With her guidance and encouragement, I've not only seen physical changes but also developed a healthier relationship with food, movement, and my body. I feel stronger, more confident, and more in control of my health.

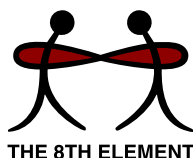

I'm also grateful that the journey doesn't stop here. I'm continuing to work with her on other important areas like sleep and stress management, and I'm looking forward to improving those as well.

Thank you Srividya, for your patience, encouragement, and the genuine care you bring to your coaching. I'm truly grateful for the positive impact you've had on my health journey.

Uthra, 36

Uthra began her journey feeling disconnected from herself, with low confidence and a constant inner voice telling her, "You're not enough." As a dancer, she felt her body was holding her back and had reached a point where she didn't even enjoy watching herself perform. Through small, consistent changes in sleep, movement, strength and mindset, she gradually rebuilt trust in herself and her body. Today, she moves with greater strength and confidence—and proudly did something she once never imagined: wore a two-piece and felt ready to be seen. As she says, "The journey has been so beautiful."

Ready to take the next step?

No two women experience menopause in the same way. For one, better sleep changes everything; for another, it's protein, strength or managing stress. The challenge isn't finding more information — it's knowing which changes will have the biggest impact for you.

That's exactly what we uncover together in my Menopause Health Assessment & Strategy Session. After our 60-minute session you'll leave with:

- ✓ Clarity On What's Driving Your Weight Gain & Low Energy
- ✓ The 2–3 Changes That Matter Most For You
- ✓ A Personalised, Realistic Action Plan
- ✓ Confidence About Where To Start
